

Providing Student Opportunities in a Partnered Project

The quality of the work that the RMIT studio developed and the high standard of career readiness in each of the interns has led to them becoming permanent assets in the Lentara marketing and communications team.

Gemma Halloran
Marketing and Communications Coordinator
Lentara UnitingCare

Hardworking students will appreciate an insight into your industry or the chance to apply for paid opportunities with your organisation.

Your input will help students understand and develop their career opportunities, as well as establish meaningful ongoing links with RMIT.

design.wil@rmit.edu.au
mediacomm.wil@rmit.edu.au

From L-R: Gemma Halloran from Lentara UnitingCare with Evan Bryce Riddle, Georgia Verrells and Blake Fullwood.

How

Share your expertise

Provide small awards or thank yous

Offer paid opportunities

Examples

Industry panel at your workplace

Assemble a group of industry colleagues to form a panel and field job-related questions from students, at a session during scheduled class time. Share relevant role or career-related information and advice.

Presentation to students at RMIT

Present to students during the project about your industry and your career.

Thank Yous or Awards

Offer $30 thankyou gift cards to all 20 students in the project, or offer $150 gift cards to each student in top team, for example.

Expenses

Provide catering for final student presentation, or contribute to program towards student travel or materials expenses.

Paid internships (paid short-term roles)

Advertise or offer a paid internship following the project.

Graduate roles

Advertise a graduate program or an ongoing role for an RMIT graduate.

Offer contract work for a student or graduate or research team

Offer a contract for further development of project outcomes.